ANOTHER WONDERFUL WEEK!

Classroom Blog

This week we continued to look at how we are all different and how these differences help us learn from one another. We learned about how our differences need to be respected and valued when we learned about Orange Shirt Day. To see more about what we learned about, check out our weekly blog! <https://www.mountviewcommunitykindergarten.com/classroom-blog>

Happy Monday Messages

Our Happy Monday Messages have been updated. Follow the link to read your child's weekly thank you note:

Mystery Object

Our new Mystery Object schedule can be found on the October calendar attached. When your child is the special helper of the day please ensure they bring their mystery object to school in a concealed bag. We will be asking 5 questions to infer what their special object is.

Learning Connections at Home

Language:

Last week our Letter of the Week was B and the word family of the week was the -am family. To help consolidate what they learned, listen to our weekly language songs. As a guided reading activity, can also work with them on our word family story:

Mathematics:

For the past two weeks we have been learning about different patterns. Students have looked at AB, ABC & ABB patterns in addition to growing and shrinking patterns. To further explore patterns at home, check out resources on our bitmoji classroom page and this fun song!
